

Lars Andersson 1A Presentation

Lars Andersson's academic career began in 1973 when he joined the Laboratory for Clinical Stress Research (Laboratoriet för Klinisk Stressforskning) at the Karolinska Institute armed with a background in social- and behavioural studies. As his first commission, he co-authored one of Sweden's four contributions to UN's Population Conference in Bucharest. By chance, he came to work on a project on social gerontology in 1974 – a field to which he has become faithful.

Lars Andersson's research touches different fields within social gerontology. His earlier works revolved around the retirement process and, among other things, the health effects of becoming a pensioner. This project involved recalling the working career and relating the effects of work-related factors to situations at the time of retirement. In 1984, he defended his dissertation "Aging and Loneliness. An interventional study of a group of elderly women", at the Karolinska Institute. As the title suggests, this dissertation discussed feelings of loneliness. The characteristics of the concept of loneliness were set apart and various types of loneliness were differentiated. Interventions were introduced in another part of the study, and their positive effects for reducing loneliness were evaluated. The experiences of loneliness also played out in the analysis of how childhood experiences affects well-being in old age.

When the research foundation Äldrecentrum (Stockholm Gerontology Research Center) was newly established in Stockholm, Lars was instituted as one of the four research heads. A number of projects were initiated. Among other things, these dealt with issues of ethics in elderly care, loneliness as well as health behaviour. In 1989, he became an associate professor in gerontology at the Karolinska Institute.

Lars Andersson has also worked with time-budget analyses where older people's activities over the day were analysed. He was also involved in a so-called Eurobarometer study, a comprehensive project where comparisons between older people in Sweden and other EU countries have been made possible. The results of the project disproved numerous myths about older people's opinions, wellbeing and living conditions.

Elderly care remains a central concern in social gerontology, especially with regards to formal and informal care. By collecting data from different sources, Lars investigated elderly people's living conditions, autonomy and own wishes about whom to receive help and support from.

Issues concerning public health are also of interest to Lars Andersson. In a longitudinal investigation of health attitudes and health behaviour, a clear cohort difference was affirmed. Public health, as well as mental health, has also been the focus of some EU projects, while other EU projects concerned policy and quality of life. Lars has also collaborated in the WHO project "Healthy Ageing" and was a member of WHO's Expert Advisory Panel on Ageing and Health 1997-2013.

In 2003, he took up the position of Professor in Ageing and later life at Linköping University. His later texts analyse ageism, or prejudices and stereotypes based on a person's age that could lead to discrimination. Lately, future issues such as how modern biotechnology can influence ageing, has also been of interest.

Lars Andersson has more than 180 publications in the field. An overview of the field could be read in two books edited by him, Socialgerontologi (2002, 2nd ed. 2013) and Cultural Gerontology (2002), and one book co-edited with Peter Öberg, Jämlik ålderdom? I samtiden och framtiden (Equality in old age? In our age and in the future) His book Ålderism (Ageism) was published in 2008. He also founded the scientific open access journal International Journal of Ageing and Later Life (IJAL), and was its Editor-in-Chief 2006-2016. He has been a member of the editorial boards of The Journal of Applied Gerontology, The Journal of Aging and Health, and Current Sociology, monograph issues, and an overseas adviser for Ageing & Society.

In addition, Lars Andersson has also made important contributions of organizational nature. Among others things, he arranged three international congresses (Stockholm 1992, Visby 2001, Stockholm 2004). For many years, he was a board member of the Research Committee “Sociology of Aging” of the International Sociological Association, and was also its president 2002-2006. Between 2004 and 2008, he was the president of the Nordic Federation of Gerontology (Nordisk Gerontologisk Förening). In 1998, he was one of the founding members of the Swedish Gerontological Society (Sveriges Gerontologiska Sällskap) and was its president from the start until 2009. He is a Fellow of The Gerontological Society of America since 1991.

Lars Andersson 1B Presentation

Lars Anderssons akademiska karriär inleddes 1973 då han med en samhälls- /beteendevetenskaplig bakgrund kom till Laboratoriet för Klinisk Stressforskning, vid Karolinska Institutet. Där blev han medförfattare till ett av Sveriges bidrag till FN:s befolkningskonferens. Redan året därpå, 1974, kom han, mest av en slump, att börja arbeta på ett socialgerontologiskt projekt – en disciplin som han därefter förblivit trogen.

Lars Anderssons forskning behandlar olika områden inom socialgerontologin. Den tidiga forskningen gällde pensioneringsprocessen, bl.a. de hälsomässiga effekterna av att gå i pension. I projektet gjordes också en arbetsanamnes och påverkan från olika faktorer under arbetslivet relaterades till tidpunkten för pensioneringen. Han disputerade 1984 vid Karolinska Institutet på en avhandling med titeln "Aging and Loneliness. An interventional study of a group of elderly women". Avhandlingsarbetet tog upp ensamhet bland äldre (kvinnor). Ensamhetsbegreppet skärskådades och olika typer av ensamhet identifierades. Projektet innehöll även en interventionsdel där effekten av en enkel åtgärd för att mildra ensamheten utvärderades och befanns vara påtaglig. Ensamhetsupplevelser fanns även med som en av faktorerna i en studie av hur barndomsupplevelser påverkar välbefinnandet i hög ålder.

När forskningen skulle starta vid den nyinrättade stiftelsen Äldrecentrum i Stockholm anställdes han 1988 som en av fyra forskningsledare. Flera projekt initierades, bl.a. om etik i äldrevården, ensamhet, och om hälsobeteende. År 1989 utnämndes han till docent i gerontologi vid Karolinska Institutet.

Lars Andersson har arbetat med tidsbudgetanalyser där äldres aktiviteter under dygnet har beskrivits. Ett omfattande projekt var den s.k. eurobarometerstudien där jämförelser har kunnat göras mellan äldre i Sverige och äldre i övriga EU-länder. Resultaten har kunnat slå hål på en mängd myter om attityder, välbefinnande och levnadsförhållanden. Äldreomsorgen är ett centralt område inom socialgerontologin, speciellt frågan om formell och informell omsorg av äldre. Med hjälp av data från olika källor har de äldres förhållanden och önskemål när det gäller varifrån man vill ha hjälp och stöd undersökts, liksom äldres autonomi.

Lars Andersson har även intresserat sig för folkhälsofrågor. I en longitudinell undersökning av hälsoattityder och hälsobeteenden har påtagliga kohortskillnader påvisats. Folkhälsa, liksom psykisk hälsa, har även behandlats i några EU-projekt. Andra EU-projekt behandlar policyfrågor samt livskvalitet. Lars har även deltagit i ett WHO-projektet Healthy Ageing, och varit medlem av WHO:s Expert Advisory Panel on Ageing and Health 1997-2013.

I september 2003 tillträdde han professuren i åldrande och äldre vid Linköpings Universitet. På senare tid har han analyserat ålderismen, d.v.s. fördomar eller stereotypa föreställningar som utgår från en människas ålder och som kan leda till diskriminering.

Lars Andersson har mer än 180 publikationer inom området, och översikter av området finns i de av honom redigerade böckerna "Socialgerontologi" (2002, andra upplagan 2013) och "Cultural Gerontology" (2002). År 2008 utkom boken "Ålderism", och 2012 tillsammans med Peter Öberg boken "Jämlik ålderdom? I samtiden och framtiden". Han grundade och var redaktör för den internationella elektroniska tidskriften "International Journal of Ageing and Later Life" (IJAL) 2006-2015, fanns i editorial board för tidskrifterna Journal of Applied Gerontology (1991-2004), Journal of Aging and Health (1988-2015) och Current Sociology, Monograph Issues (2002-2006), och var International Editorial Adviser för tidskriften Ageing & Society (2004-2016).

Lars Andersson har även gjort betydande insatser av organisatorisk karaktär, bl.a. arrangerat tre internationella kongresser (Stockholm 1992, Visby 2001, Stockholm 2004). Han var styrelsemedlem i Research Committee "Sociology of Aging" inom Internationella Sociologförbundet i 19 år, och var dess ordförande 2002-2006. Han var också ordförande i Nordisk Gerontologisk Förening, 2004-2008, och var med och startade Sveriges Gerontologiska Sällskap 1998 och var dess ordförande från starten till 2009. Han är också Fellow of The Gerontological Society of America sedan 1991. År 2013 tilldelades han Stora Gerontologipriset.
