

THE NORDIC BALTIC DOCTORAL NETWORK IN SOCIAL WORK (NBSW)

12th Summer School 10th - 14th August 2020 Helsinki, Finland

Experiences, encounters and engagement in social work research to be hosted by the Swedish School of Social Science, University of Helsinki (Finland), in cooperation with the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Helsinki and Sosnet – The Finnish National University Network for Social Work.

The Nordic-Baltic Doctoral Network in Social Work (NBSW) is a joint network of the doctoral schools, universities and other institutions in social work in seven countries: Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway and Sweden.

We invite PhD students from the Nordic, Baltic and other countries to participate in the summer school. It aims to bring together PhD candidates in social work for five days of intensive lectures and discussions on experiences, encounters and engagements in social work research. Submission of a paper (optionally short or long, see further instructions below) connected with the theme of the summer school is a prerequisite for participation.

During the Summer School 2020 in Helsinki, special attention will be paid to the different, yet interlinked aspects of experiences, encounters and engagement(s) in social work: What is the role of the experiences of various actors in social work? How do social policy reforms, the increasing application of technological tools and new organizational models and working methods affect encounters in social work? What are the possibilities of furthering engaged social work practices?

The role of experiences is vital within social work education and practice: Experiences during education and field placements have a substantial impact on students' identities and future choices. The experiences of social workers regarding different aspects of their work are central to their views, reactions and actions. Clients' experiences of encounters with social services are essential indicators of social work relationships and practices.

Social policy reforms and technological development(s) (automatization, digitalization etc.) affect, not only the working environments of social workers but also the service encounters and experiences of clients.

Thus, the Summer School will also focus on the changing faces of encounters (close encounters, distant encounters, or lack of encounters). Recent national and international studies have pointed to the various consequences of the "technological revolution" in social work. Some technical solutions have enabled closer and more meaningful encounters between social workers and clients. Other technological developments - often connected to more overarching administrative reforms - have, however, lead to more distant, shallow, or even non-existing encounters within social work. Thus, what are the possibilities for meaningful encounters and relationship building in the changing context of social work?

The concept of engagement can be understood as the key ingredient when conducting meaningful social work in the modern society. A central challenge in this era of technological revolution is how to conduct engaging social work in a society in which a growing extent of encounters take place in a digital environment? Engagement is also a central aspect in terms of how social work organizations can engage social workers to remain within professional social work. How does one make social work engaging when social workers experience that they have too little time and too heavy a workload?
